

BRITISH VALUES

As part of our ongoing commitment to the British Values Curriculum and our unique Rainbow Curriculum here at St Anselm's, we invite you to read this story with your children. Your involvement is crucial in reinforcing these values and qualities at home, so please take a moment to explore the themes and talk about them together. Let's work hand in hand to inspire thoughtful conversations and help our children be good friends, deep thinkers and morally responsible citizens with an active voice, who are informed to make positive contributions to society.

In the news this week

The UK government's culture secretary, Lisa Nandy, has written to video-sharing platforms, such as YouTube and TikTok, asking them to actively share more educational content for children. Nandy stated that while YouTube has improved children's content on its platform, it is not doing enough to make sure the content is easily seen by children.

Things to talk about at home ...

- > Tell someone at home about the type of things you enjoy watching and where you like to watch them. Ask someone older what they watched as a child. Ask about the choice of programmes, and where and when they were able to view them.
- > Do you believe there should be more checks or rules for what people can watch online?

Which British Value?

RULE OF LAW

We respect the rules and laws of our society.

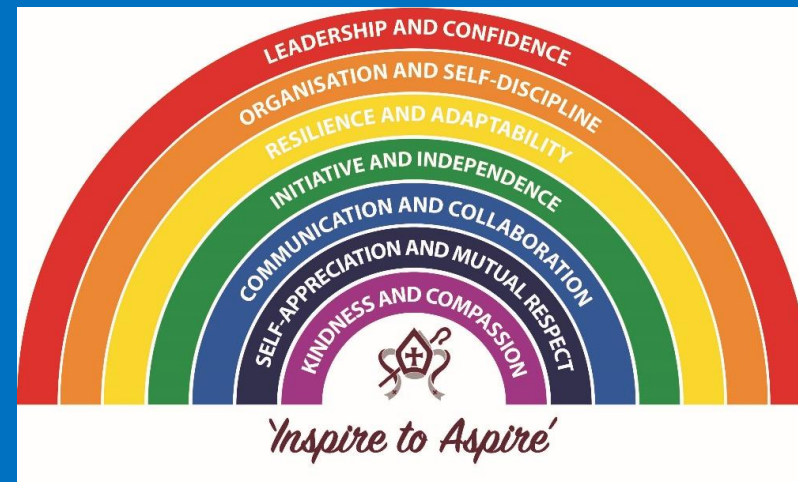

Laws help us to be safe, and happy.

What can we learn from this?

We often have rules for going online when we are at school or home. Rules are there to help protect us and keep us safe.

COMMUNICATION AND COLLABORATION

What can we learn from this?

Lisa Nandy talking to video-sharing platforms is a great example of how important it is to work together and communicate clearly to make things better. She talks to these companies to explain how they can provide better experience for children. By listening to each other and sharing ideas, they can come up with good solutions that everyone agrees on. This teamwork is important because big changes often need people to work together, share responsibility, and use their different skills to solve problems. It shows how talking and working with others can help make the world a safer and better place.
